about us

Ampersand is an independent publishing house established in 2012. In the beginning, our catalog specialized mainly in Written Culture, but now we have expanded into new topics, such as Visual Studies, literary essays, and Fashion Studies.

Ampersand is obsessed with reading in all its forms, as a practice and as a relationship with cultural products around us: books, art, and fashion.

Natural and Mythical History of the Elephants

The fascination that men have with elephants goes as far as the ancient civilizations. Aristotle, Plutarch and Marco Polo, among others, admired their intelligence and guile. Throughout history, pachyderms were gifted to kings, emperors, and popes, but also used as war machines and circus attractions.

In this exhaustive and rigorous research, the authors go through art, religion, science, and mythology to bring out the importance of this animal in Western and Eastern culture.

- Pages: 250
- Keywords: nature, culture and society, mythology
- Authors: JOSÉ EMILIO BURUCÚA is an art historian. He is an emeritus professor at the Universidad de Buenos Aires and Universidad de San Martín, and a visiting professor in Paris, Florence, and Berlin.
- MARTA PENHOS has a doctorate in History at the Universidad de Buenos Aires and Universidad de San Martín, and a visiting professor in Paris, Florence, and Berlin.

What did Fitz Roy and Darwin see when they arrived at the “end of the world”? How did they transform that experience into an image of this part of the map?

This book is a deep analysis of the Narrative of the Surveying Voyages of his Majesty's Ships Adventure and Beagle, published in 1839. Penhos manages to decode the visual and literary devices that worked in the invention of the legends of the southernmost point in Patagonia.

- Pages: 394
- Keywords: science, exploration, art, Darwin
- Author: MARTA PENHOS is an art historian, professor-researcher at the Universidad de Buenos Aires and Universidad de San Martín.
Memoirs of Readers

What does “Reading” mean? How does this practice affect our point of view or even our lifestyle? This series is about life and its extraordinary encounters with a book, author or text.

Different Latin American writers go through their stories as readers. However, they are not merely theorizing. Instead, they give us a glimpse into small but meaningful aspects of their lives and the moments when a book changes its path.

Other readers

- The Center of The Earth, Jorge Monteleone
- Phantoms of Knowledge, Noé Jitrik
- Excess and Reading, José Emilio Burucúa
- Trance, Alan Pauls
- Reading: a life..., Daniel Link
- When the Text Finds Substance, Margo Glantz
- The Invisible life, Sylvia Iparraguirre

MARÍA MORENO is one of the sharpest chroniclers of Argentine literature. Her texts combine freedom, rigorous research and a critical perception of life.

TAMARA KAMENSZAIN. Argentinian writer.

EDGARDO COZARINSKY. Argentinian writer, filmmaker, and playwright.

SYLVIA MOLLOY. Novelist and literary critic. She lives in the US and has taught Latin American literature at Princeton, Yale, and NYU, where she created the MFA in Creative Writing in Spanish.

CARLOS ALTAMIRANO. Emeritus professor at Universidad Nacional de Quilmes. He is a specialist in intellectual history.
The Origins of Popular Libraries

In 1870, Argentina passed a law that promoted the development of popular libraries. The author explores the difficulties that these institutions went through, the role of Domingo Faustino Sarmiento, the meaning of the libraries in Latin American history and the tension between the State and civil society.

- Pages: 320
- Keywords: Library, State, civil society
- Author: JAVIER PLANAS is a professor-researcher at the Universidad de La Plata. He is a specialist in the history of libraries in Argentina.

Authors Don’t Write Books

Which role have the editors played in Latin America? This book goes through different editorial projects and catalogs from Chile, Argentina, and Venezuela. De Diego analyses how markets, new technologies, the economic crisis and the Franco regime in Spain affected the book industry. Besides, he explores the evolution in the roles of editors and the new readers in a time of changing paradigms.

- Pages: 246
- Keywords: Latin America, history, books, culture
- Author: JOSÉ LUIS DE DIEGO has a doctorate in Literature and is a professor at the Universidad de La Plata. He is a specialist in the history of the book and publishing houses in Latin America.

Women Readers in the Nineteenth Century

Why and what do women read? Graciela Batticuore rewrites the story of illustrated women from Latin America, particularly from Argentina. Through different historic events, paintings and literature, she proposes a classification of types of women readers. Newspapers, letters, and novels not only create the imaginary and real universe of females but also become valid tools for social mobility in modern life.

- Pages: 174
- Keywords: women, literature, art
- Author: GRACIELA BATTICUORE is an Argentinian essay writer, novelist, poet and professor-researcher at the Universidad de Buenos Aires.

Write, Read, Preserve

Write, read, preserve is an original work, so far unpublished in any other language other than Spanish, written by Guglielmo Cavallo. As a product of his long academic trajectory in the field of Paleography, it allows us to reconstruct with detail the structure of written culture in each of its stages: production, circulation, reception, as well as its preservation and status, within ancient and medieval societies. Cavallo leans on a rich variety of documentary sources: from books and written documents to inscriptions recovered from archaeological remains, classic literary and philosophical texts, or art pieces such as sculptures, engravings, and drawings.

- Pages: 378
- Keywords: written culture, ancient & medieval societies
- Author: GUGLIELMO CAVALLO is an Italian paleographer. Professor of Latin Paleography at the Scuola Speciale per Archivisti e Bibliotecari of Rome and Greek Paleography at the University of Rome La Sapienza.

The Mediated Reading

Focused on Media Ecology theory but with the contribution of History, Neuroscience, Multimedia, and Hypertext notions, this work explores the way we read in a multiscreen world. Francisco Albarello analyses the new and creative skills that the multitask reader has to develop to deal, read and understand different kinds of texts: pictures, audio files, animations, screen savers, video sequences and, last but not least, the written ones.

- Pages: 224
- Keywords: digital culture, screens, society
- Author: FRANCISCO ALBARELLO is a professor specialized in mass media communication. He is the director of the doctoral program in Communication at the Universidad Austral from Buenos Aires.

The Hybrid Text

Today’s world is full of screens. Writing for mass media demands a particular knowledge and sensibility. In this work, Ramírez Gelbes exposes, between theory and practice, the necessary skills to produce textual content in the digital environment.

- Pages: 270
- Keywords: communication, digital, society
- Author: SILVIA RAMÍREZ GELBES has a doctorate in Linguistics at the Universidad de Buenos Aires. She is the director of the Master in Journalism at the Universidad de San Andrés.
